"Hurry, Hurry" Doctor Cries to Workers Who Risk Lives in Effort

MOOSE RIVER, N. S., April 20. (UP)—Three hundred men worked like mad today in a crumbling, perilous shaft in one last desperate effort to reach two Toronto mine owners rapidly dying of cold and exposure after more than seven days' imprisonment 141 feet beneath the surface.

One of the three men who was trapped a week ago Sunday night, Herman B. Magill, already was dead in the cavernous and wet underground prison.

Through an iron pipe driven from the surface into the mine, the other two, Dr. D. A. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, begged the rescuers:

"In the name of God, hurry, hurry."

The doctor, able only too well to diagnose his own possible fate, feared he and Scadding could last only a few hours longer. Rising water in the mine added to the peril of exposure.

Hot brandy and concentrated soup, lowered in tubes through the pipe buoyed them somewhat. And

Warning Issued as "Number" Operators Decide to Leave Columbus

OTHER OFFICIALS ACT

"Bookies" Next on Dunn's List; Racket is Operated in Circleville

Sheriff Charles H. Radcliff today warned "number" game gambling house operators not to invade Pickaway-co.

The sheriff's announcement followed closely after similar action taken surrounding counties and came as a result of a drive by Sheriff Ross Anderson of Franklin-co to forestall such practices. Operators of several "numbers" houses in Columbus declared they would establish headquarters in other districts following the edict of Police Chief John H. Dunn that "numbers" games must go.

"Opportunity to Leave"

"If any operators invade Pickaway-co," the sheriff said, "they will be given opportunity to leave. If they do not follow our advice their next stopping place will be jail."

Sheriffs William Belhorn of Fairfield-co, Norman F. Clark of Madison-co, and C. E. McKinnie of Delaware-co made similar statements, refusing a foothold to any houses which may be forced from Columbus.

It is reported one house has already been located near Grove City and another near West Jefferson.

Operating in City
What effect the drive in Columbus will have on several places in Circleville that have been writing "numbers" is not certain. Several individuals and business establishments have been adding considerably to their incomes as a result of the racket which has moved much further than the "beginners" stage in Circleville.

Arrests have been ordered in Columbus in an effort to break up the game. The next object of Chief Dunn's activity, it is reported, is to smash race track "bookies," another lucrative gaming industry.

Three persons escaped with minor injuries Sunday afternoon when the auto in which they were riding broke five concrete guard posts on Route 22 west of the river bridge. The car went over a steep embankment, hit a tree and overturned.

Those in the auto were Mrs. Bryan Custer, W. High-st, driver; her brother, David Traphagan, and her mother, Mrs. R. F. Traphagan of London.

All were shaken and bruised. Mr. Traphagan was treated at Berger hospital by Dr. E. L. Montgomery for a cut on the forehead. He and Mrs. Traphagan were taken to the hospital by passing motorists. Mrs. Custer was removed to her home in the Albough ambulance.

Driving to London

WOMEN PICKETS IN GLOVE FIRM STRIKE IN RIOT

COSHOCOTON, April 20. (UP)—Non-union women glove workers clashed with striking women pickets today when they attempted to return to their jobs in the strike besieged Indianapolis Glove Co. plant under court order.

Twenty-five women strikers, clad in overalls and trousers, and 200 sympathizers blockaded the main entrance to the factory and refused to permit the 125 non-union workers to enter.

Fighting was limited to several minor skirmishes. No serious injuries were reported. One of the non-strikers—all members of the Independent Glove Workers Association, company organization—fought her way through the ranks of the pickets to the main door.

As she reached out to open it and lead other non-strikers back to their jobs, she was seized from behind by a woman striker and hurled backward down a short flight of steps.

Several other non-strikers came to her rescue and carried her across the street where they had retired from the brief skirmish.

NO serious crisis was expected to result over Turkey's reoccupation of the demilitarized Dardanelles zone, shown shaded in this map. Turkey's relations with Great Britain, France and Russia are excellent.

$796.20 IS RECEIVED FOR HANDLING U. S. PRISONERS

A check for $796.20 that is "velvet" went into the county treasury Monday as payment by the government to Pickaway-co for keeping federal prisoners in January, February and March.

The check was sent to Sheriff Charles Radcliff by R. Kenneth Kerr, marshal for the southern Ohio district.

The money, the sheriff reported, is nearly enough to pay all jail expenses for three months. Neither he nor any of his aides receive any money for handling federal prisoners though the work adds much to their duties and requires much time.

The U. S. marshal has often complimented the sheriff and his deputies for their efficient supervision of federal prisoners.

In an ominous speech a special session of the league convened in Geneva, Britain's foreign secretary, said Britain would consider new financial sanctions against Italy, and that such actions must be taken.

His speech followed by Ramses Wissa Wadia, Egyptian nationalist leader, who said the price of an armistice was the enforcement of military penalties against Italy.

stores of gun cotton out along the road to Dessye today, planning to blow up bridges over the river to block mountain roads to the path of the Italian army.

Natives, armed and poorly stricken, began to evacuate the city, believing the arrival of Italian troops was imminent.

Motor lorries roared unopposed through the city. Normal life was suspended.

The road from Dessye was crowded with motor trucks from the front, and tattered, fleeing refugees from the Ethiopian army.

Legation Is Haven

Foreigners of many nationalities besieged the bomb-proof Italian legation for shelter. Americans prepared to take refuge there, if necessary, by order of American Minister Cornelius Van H. Engelbrecht. Bhlata Tekela, mayor of the city, tried to rally to him the aid of 5,000 nondescript men, some armed only with arrows and spears, who pledged themselves to a wildly cheering demonstration yesterday to defend the city.

The government issued orders that women sought to take their places with their men.

"All able men must make a last stand for liberty," said a government appeal to the people "it is better to die than to be enslaved the spirit of Addis Ababa still lives. (It was at Addis in 1896 that the Ethiopians slaughtered an Italian army.)"

Refugees sought to leave for the coast by train.

A United Press correspondent traveling by caravan in the north sent word by native runner that dispatch runners, panting from exertion, were converging on Dessye. Brogan, 60 miles from Addis Ababa, with reports that two columns of Italians had crossed the Rodi river 30 miles to the south east.

This agrees with messages of ports from Rome. One of the columns was believed to be Collins, right, of California, are pictured with the committee's chief counsel, James Sullivan, left, going over notes. Gavan, who predicted "there will be a sensational break that will involve the top boys" of the Townsend organization, said more than 50 threatening letters and telephone calls had been received since arrival of the men in Los Angeles.

Howe, President's Valued Advisor, Dies in Capital

Death Regarded as Blow to Campaign; Joined Roosevelt Many Years Ago; Ability Valued By Executive

United Press White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 20.—(UP)—The flag over the White House flew at half-mast today for Louis McHenry Howe, the little man who put Franklin D. Roosevelt into the nation's highest office and whose loss will be keenly felt by the president in the 1936 political campaign.

Virtually forgotten in the rush of three years of the New Deal, Howe who rejoined in the title of "Franklin's No Man," died quietly Saturday night in the Naval hospital where he had been a patient since last fall.

His death comes as a direct personal blow to the chief executive, for Howe was his political mentor for an unbroken period of 25 years. His passing means that for the first time since he entered public life as an obscure state senator from the rock-ribbed Republican of Dutchess in New York, Mr. Roosevelt enters the next campaign without the counsel of the one individual whose advice he valued above all others.

A White House announcement said funeral services for Howe would be held at 4 p. m. tomorrow in the east room of the White House. Mrs. Howe and her son, Hartley, arrived at the White House last night from Fall River, Mass., and conferred with Mr. Roosevelt on funeral plans.

Although no announcement was made as to plans, it was expected burial would be at Fall River, Howe's home, and that the President and Mrs. Roosevelt would follow the coffin to the grave, probably Wednesday.

It is no secret that even James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman and trusted party lieutenant, never enjoyed the intimacy since last fall.

So far as Democratic party fortunes go, the death of Howe was conceded as having no broad effect. To the president, however, the loss, it was believed, would be reflected when the time comes to sit down and map out the strategy of coming political battle.

Known as the "Medieval gnome" because of his dwarfed and carelessly appearance, Howe, nevertheless, won the respect and admiration of those with whom he dealt. He "knew" people. His devotion to Franklin Roosevelt had no limitations and he gloried in the job of buffer.

Howe joined Mr. Roosevelt when the latter was in the New York

YOUNG OUTLINES SIX-POINT PLAN TO BEAT DAVEY

Repeal of Sales Tax as Applied to Food, Clothing, Medicine Stressed

COLUMBUS, April 20.—(UP)—Congressman Stephen M. Young will seek the Democratic nomination as governor in opposition to Governor Martin L. Davey on a six-point program, the major portion of which centers about repeal of the sales tax.

The gubernatorial candidate has declared himself opposed to the tax as it applies to food, clothing and medicine.

The other planks in the Young platform are:

1. A recovery program for Ohio for the next two years in support of President Roosevelt's national recovery program.
2. Complete co-operation between the state and national administrations.
3. An increase in the maximum allowance for old age pensions.
4. A searching investigation of the state liquor control department.
5. "Fair and equal treatment" to all firms doing business with the state.

Young has also placed himself on record in denouncement of what he terms "the shaking down of highway department laborers who are paid only 50 cents an hour."

legislature and fighting Tammany Hall. Later he came to Washington when his chief was named assistant secretary of the navy.

When Mr. Roosevelt was stricken with infantile paralysis at Campo Bello, N. B., Howe sat night after night at the bedside, read to his patient and comforted him with the philosophy that a man might be down but he is never out.

all Tales

MARVIN DREIBACH'S bulls have hurried many fishermen and hunters from fields in Pickaway-twp. Now comes the story of a truly fast bull.

Marvin had circulated a tale that one of his bulls, to keep in practice, raced with the Chesapeake & Ohio "Sportsman", midnight passenger train, and usually came out on top. Some of his friends doubted the story and planned a surprise by visiting the Dreibach farm one night to see the bull run.

Mr. Dreibach saw them approaching and knew what they wanted so he told one of his hands to tell the men he had gone away.

"Where did he go?" asked Jerry Estell, member of the delegation. "Oh," replied the hired man, "he went to Chicago, then he planned to visit in St. Paul, and from there he is going to Vancouver, and down to Seattle, then San Francisco, from there to Phoenix, and then to New Orleans before coming home. But he'll be back sometime tomorrow."

"What do you mean, back sometime tomorrow?" queried Mr. Estell. "Why," said the hand, "he was riding that bull you came down to see."

ITALY'S FLAG OVER LAKE TANA

GREAT BRITAIN'S concern over the Italian successes that have brought Lake Tana within the conquered territory in Ethiopia is readily comprehensible. So, too, is the strong agitation in England for independent sanctions, regardless of the action of the League of Nations, and for the closing of the Suez Canal to Italian ship and supply ships.

With Lake Tana in his possession, Mussolini is placed in a menacing position. It is from this lake, high in the Ethiopian mountains, that the water of the Blue Nile comes, irrigating the Sudan, where England contemplates extensive cotton-growing operations, flowing on through ancient Egypt and emptying into the Mediterranean.

Lake Tana is as vital to England's North African possessions as a major artery is to the human body. Presumably, Italy wants Ethiopia for colonization purposes, and colonists require more than anything else fertile, productive lands, that are not present to be found in Ethiopia.

Through the diversion of the Blue Nile, wonders in the way of irrigation and fertilization could be accomplished, at a cost, of course, of the waters that now moisten the soil of Britain's Sudan and Egypt. Italy's possession of Lake Tana, accordingly, represents an important military accomplishment. It is dangerous, however, to the cause of peace.

A BOY IN CONVICT'S GARB

A RECENT issue of the publication of the National Probation Association should fill the American people with a sense of overwhelming shame. It prints a picture of a twelve-year-old boy dressed in the striped garb of a prison convict. Underneath it was this paragraph:

"With the urge of Spring upon him, this twelve-year-old boy set forth one morning hobnobbing his way to visit relatives in a Southern State. He was caught getting off a freight train, arrested, sentenced to thirty days in the county chain gang."

If this boy, having had his first contacts with the riff-raff of a jail, should follow a somewhat logical course and turn to delinquency and then to crime under the influence of the impressions made upon his immature mind by this early experience, where would the responsibility lie?

The answer to this question requires no very profound thought. Responsibility would rest upon society, which could conceive of no better way to treat a mere child than to throw him into jail as if he were a hardened, adult criminal or bum.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

NOT MUCH PUBLICITY has been given to a recent proposal of the American Federation of Labor. It urges a permanent federal housing authority, of non-partisan makeup. Appropriations there would be asked for housing for persons in lower brackets. The houses would be built by workers in the building trades at prevailing wages.

Representative Henry Ellenbogen of Pittsburgh, Pa., has such a housing bill in the house. It probably will be smothered. Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, with a bill less comprehensive, cannot get it through the senate.

The lobby against federal housing is one of the most powerful in Washington. Of the millions spent by the Roosevelt administration, less than 10 percent has gone toward housing persons of the lowest brackets.

SHARPCROPPERS
A scandal of the first water in the administration. Evicted sharpcroppers in Arkansas have been left to starve by WPA and Resettlement officials. In Washington, the "local" sharpcroppers are being made to feel the same.

BOOM CAUSES MEEHAN TO QUIT

WASHINGTON—Members of the Securities and Exchange Commission are not saying much about it, but the rapid rise of the stock market is worrying them considerably.

Recently William O. Douglas, newest and most forthright SEC Commissioner, called in Frank Meehan, assistant director of the Trading Division. It is Meehan's job to detect pools or other violations of SEC rules on the Stock Exchange.

However, Douglas intimated in plain and pointed language that Meehan was not detecting them. The market is way over-priced, Douglas told him, and all sorts of under-cover pools are operating.

"You've got to remember," he concluded, "that when the next crash comes, the SEC is going to be on the spot. We are the commission set up to protect the public, to prevent runaway markets."

"The Senate investigation of the Hoover crash will be mild compared with the next investigation. And you'll be the star witness. They'll say: 'Just where were you, Mr. Meehan, when such-and-such a stock sky-rocketed? Was it not your job, Mr. Meehan, to be in charge of the Trading Division? Were you not supposed to prevent pool operations? Just what, if anything, did you do about it?'"

Not long afterward, Meehan resigned. He is now occupying desk space in the office of George Breen, one of the manipulators of the famous Sinclair oil pool, which during the days of the Coolidge boom market netted the participants a clean $12,000,000 without their putting up a cent.

NO TIME TO SHOP

Mrs. Roosevelt has a unique reason for having all her clothes made in New York.

"It is not that the styles and shops of Washington are inferior," she says, "It is because I have more time when I'm in New York. Down here I never have a minute."

EASTER RACKETS

The Easter egg-rolling on the White House lawn has come to be a racket for youngsters under ten years of age.

A rule exists barring adults from the grounds unless accompanied by a child. This year scores of children did a thriving business as escorts for adults who wished to mill with the crowds but had no child. The average fee charged was twenty cents. One boy made seven dollars.

Another egg-rolling racket is the practice of parents intentionally losing their children in the crowd to gain publicity.

When a child becomes lost it is taken to the steps of the Executive Mansion and held up before the entire crowd by a White House aide, who announces the child's name over the microphone. Then, breathlessly, the parent rushes to reclaim the strayed infant, and bows to the applause of 50,000 onlookers.

The teacher of modern history just teaches it as it comes along, leaving for some later and more leisurely generation to determine what it's all about.

THE CAMDEN RUBY MURDER

by ADAM BLISS

COPYRIGHT—RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:
Detective Keyes and Gary Maughan are attempting to unravel the mysterious murder of Margalo Younger, an actress and old friend of Maughan. She was killed with a needle-like instrument as she and Maughan sat in the home of Dou Van Every, a collector of rare jewels, whom she had met through his friend, Maughan, listening to his oration on the history of the famous Camden ruby. At the time she was wearing the ruby against the wishes of Van Every who described it as a "murder stone." Among those questioned by the detective were Maughan, himself; Van Every; his young niece, Joyce, who lives with him; her fiancé, Allan Foster, who at one time was in love with the dead actress; and Joyce's companion, Laura Randall. Another suspect is Roy Barrimore, close friend of the actress, who shot himself shortly after her death. Van Every tells Maughan how he bought the ruby from two nuns. Joyce confesses to Maughan that she has secured a job in a department store against her uncle's wishes. The detective and Maughan start for the home of Mrs. Bryce, an intimate friend of Van Every, who shot himself shortly after her death. Van Every tells Maughan how he bought the ruby from two nuns. Joyce confesses to Maughan that she has secured a job in a department store against her uncle's wishes. The detective and Maughan start for the home of Mrs. Bryce, an intimate friend of Van Every, who shot himself shortly after her death.

THE INQUEST next morning lasted about an hour. Van Every and I testified along with a dozen other witnesses, and the verdict was what we expected—that Margalo Younger was murdered by "persons unknown."
Keyes seemed rather worried as he joined us later. He invited me to go to his office with him. Van Every left us to go to the office of his real estate agent.
In Keyes' office, the detective started to pace the floor, chewing on an unlighted cigarette. "I'm not getting any place, Maughan," he muttered.
"What about Gonzales—Margalo's post friend?"
"Ought to be here now. Late."
"Where was he yesterday?"
"Out of town, apparently."
"His Baltimore this morning?"
"Same. I'm getting worried about him. He may die."
A buzz on his phone, and he picked up the receiver. When he hung up, after a moment, he turned to me, surprise in his hard blue eyes.
"Young Foster wants to see me."
Foster sat down, fiddling to both of us pleasantly. "I wondered how the chap would feel if he knew his fiancée was one of the army of workers at Gribble's. Joyce had probably told him the same story she fed her uncle."
"Mr. Maughan, he seemed pleased about it anyway. I told him, 'I've been trying to get this working idea out of her head.'"
"Yes," I murmured.
"Now what is it, Foster?" Keyes asked abruptly. I was thankful for his interruption, not relishing Foster's questions about Joyce.
"Well, I've been thinking, sir. A lot about the old Mar—Miss Younger was murdered."
Keyes tapped the desk with his fingers, and sighed as if he expected to get little information from Foster. "You know that I was there that night."
"Yes, and I know you accompanied Miss Van Every."
"Yes, I did. Definitely."
"How long did you linger near the library door, after she had gone upstairs?" Keyes asked crossly.
"I watched Joyce go upstairs, and then when she was near her door, I started down."
"A minute? Two minutes?"
"Not longer than two minutes, sir. I'm sure."
"Just the time it took her to get up the stairs?" the big captain was watching Foster closely. Suddenly I felt sorry for the boy. "In that time did you look back into the library?"
"I did just before I went down. A glance, that's all."
"Why didn't you tell me this yesterday?"
"I—I didn't think it necessary."
"I understand Miss Van Every had left the door open when you entered the house. Was it open when you reached it? The front door?"
"Yes, it was."
"Open all the time you were upstairs?"
"I suppose so, sir. It was ajar about a foot when I reached it and went down the outside stairs."
"Miss Van Every told me that it was barely open when you came up. Did it seem to you that it was open when you went down?"
"I couldn't tell you that. I don't remember, but as I look back over that night, I think, no, I know there was a taxi outside waiting."
"A taxi? Why didn't you tell me this yesterday?" Keyes was exasperated.
"It isn't out of the ordinary to see a taxi pulled up to the curb any place. It wasn't right against the house on the left. I went up to the driver, the motor was running, and asked him if he had a passenger. He said yes, so I walked a couple of blocks down the street, and found another."
"What had you done with the taxi when you came in?"
"Joyce told me to dismiss that one."
"Can you describe this taxi driver?"
"No, it was a black and white cab, that's all I remember about it. The lights were on, and the motor running."
"Can't you remember anything about the driver?"
"No."
Keyes reached for his telephone, and began giving directions rapidly. A black and white cab had been traced to the Van Every residence around 1:15 Tuesday morning. He wanted all the information possible concerning the passengers, and the driver. When he hung up, he flung away his cigar and took a fresh one, biting off the end savagely.
After Foster had gone, he called Dr. Narro, and, luckily finding him in a black and white cab outside the Van Every residence Monday night when he had attended Miss Younger. I could see his disappointment as he thanked Narro.
"Wasn't there when Narro came," he announced to me.
"We were talking over the black and white cab when Gonzales was announced. I looked at him curiously as he sat down. A short man, probably five feet six, slender, swarthy skin. His hair was glossy black, and from his temples

BOTH TO BLAME

SINGULAR coincidences in bridge are numerous. Here is one that occurred the other evening. Within an hour, sitting in the same position at the table, the same partner and I were guilty of similar faults, costing us one game and one small slam. After his opening bid of 1-No Trump, made on two very similar hands, I regret that the more expensive error was more my mistake than my partner's.

North dealt. He had a choice between an opening bid of 1-Spade and 1-No Trump. Either would have been correct. He chose 1-No Trump. I made my weak take-out call of 2-Spades. We were not vulnerable. Had he bid either 3-Spades or 3-No Trumps I would have gone 4-Spades. He bid only 2-No Trumps on a very powerful hand. When I went 3-Spades he let the call die. As he had an optional opening bid of 1-Spade, both of us thought afterwards that he should have either bid game at no trumps or spades.

Automatic Nervous System Regulates Bodies

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE MEDICAL problem of deafness is by no means a simple one. It must be classified first into the two great divisions of adult and childhood deafness.

Taking up the problem of deafness in childhood first, we must face the fact that there are certain cases which no amount of treatment or preventive measure can help. Some of these are the horn deaf mutes, most of whom have deaf-mutism as an hereditary trait.

The only thing that can be done with these unfortunate is to institutionalize them, or adjust them so that they are able to make some place for themselves in the world.

Almost in the same class are the children who, as a result of some infectious disease—scarlet fever, meningitis—have some unaccountable alteration in the internal ear or auditory nerve. Of this class Helen Keller is an example. She is also the supreme example of the ability, by training and will power, to adjust oneself to so serious a disability. Some such adjustment as she has made is all that can be hoped for in cases of this kind.

There is with children, however, a much larger group in which deafness results from infection of the internal ear, tonsils, adenoids or sinuses, and passage of a bolt of lightning through a person's body are caused by the resultant burns. It is purely accident that these scars or burns definitely resemble objects.

There is a county in the United States with an area almost as large as the combined areas of Massachusetts and Maryland. It is San Bernardino county in California, having an area of 20,174 square miles.

The term "coolie" takes its origin from two Chinese words—"koo" meaning strength, and "lee" meaning to hire.

Knowing you can add two and two, is mere recognition of a fact, but is more concisely to those who can't.

Factographs

Lightning sometimes leaves prints on the bodies of persons it strikes. Many cases have been recorded where actual images of trees, ships and other objects appeared to be photographed on the person's body, but scientists declare that the marks left by the

TWO SURVIVORS TALK FROM MINE 141 FEET DEEP

at 9:15 a. m. they were tremendously cheered by the fact that they could hear the rescue workers tunneling furiously toward their prison.

"How much longer do you think we'll have to wait?" Scadding pleaded over a little microphone that was lowered to them so that they could conserve their waning energy by not having to shout up the pipe.

C. H. Ivey, brother-in-law of Dr.
Robertson, was at the other end of the circuit.

He told them only an hour more.
But neither Ivey nor anyone else
on the surface dared hope that it would be that soon.

Officials said they were "hopeful" the rescue workers could break through to the mine tunnel by possibly noon providing—always that dread doubt—that there were no more cave-ins in the sloping shaft in which the rescue crews gladly were risking their lives.

Ivey, keeping anxious vigil at the surface along with Nova Scottish officials and hundreds of people from the countryside, spoke first to Dr. Robertson over the improved microphone circuit.

Steaming soup in vials was lowered through a pipe.

Men Forget Pains

On the surface and in the slopping shaft leading to the underground workings, men who had been laboring for a week forgot their aches and kept going on their nerves.

They placed all their hope on being able to make an opening by way of the so-called Reynolds shaft, a sloping entrance into the mine so dangerous that it was abandoned 25 years ago. They turned to this shaft after repeated rock slides in the main vertical shaft had blocked that avenue.

Timbers in the Reynolds shaft were so rotten with age that they crumbled almost at a touch. Crews of men worked behind the daggers at the front to place new timbers. No one knew when tons of rock might give way and bury them all. But no one seemed to care.

MITES FOR FRED BETSCH PLANNED FOR TUESDAY

Burial will be in Grandview cemetery. Mr. Betsch died Saturday morning.

MONSTER'S SEASON HERE

INVERNESS, Scotland, April 20
—(UP)—The Lochness monster has officially opened the summer tourist season.

Three Glasgow university students reported seeing the monster, which after years of residence is almost a community pet, "snorting and swimming through the water at tremendous speed." It was about 35 feet long, they said,
"with a snakelike head and an undulating body with three humps."

Smashes Triangle

THROWING patrons of a gay, crowded Chicago night club into a wild scramble, Mrs. Betty Martin, 32-year-old blonde, fired a fusillade of shots at her husband, Andrew, who, she said,
was there with another woman.
He died soon after at a Chicago hospital. "I wanted to fix him so he wouldn't treat other girls as he did me," Mrs. Martin sobbed in explaining the shooting which climaxed a whirlwind courtship and marriage that lasted four months.
